Another-Family Reunion

Washington .- Evident to the participants in the Conference is a clearer understanding of the thought and purpose of the nations concerned. Al though the day's work is based on an "agenda" or fixed program of definite objects to be attained—the first steps that must be taken if peace is to be assured—there is a bigger and broader development perceptible in the undercurrents of the gathering of the peace

When the President says he hopes that something like an annual council of the nations may be induced by the success of the Washington Conference, should be an annual "get acquainted" assemblage.
